LOCAL STREET RAILWAYS ASK FOR AN INCREASE OF RATES

Holds That Officials Have Right to Do So to Make Repairs

SAYS BUS LINE CAN TRANSFER

The Westside Eectric Street Railway company and the Webster, Monessen, Belle Vernon and Fayette City Street Railway company have filed applications with the Public Service Commission at Harrisburg for permission to increase their rates to become effective on the first day of August next.

The new rates of fare as filed with the Commission provide for an increase from five cents to seven cents in each zone, these new rates to apply to both street car lines. This makes a change in every zone rate with the exception of the Monessen bridge, where the fare is now seven cents to street car passengers, but by the purchase of tickets, which is provided for in the new rate the increase will only be nominal. The new tariff provides that passengers can purchase tickets at the rate of four for 25 cents, making each trip cost 6 1-4 cents, a feature which will appeal very strongly to the traveling public. Moreover, by purchasing tickets the rate of fare between Charleroi and Monessen is only increased one-half cent, and those passengers who board the cars at the south end of the bridge will be carried to Monessen for 6 1-4c if they use tickets, instead of 7c which they pay now. However, single cash fares will cost seven cents in every zone on the line after the date above noted. Under this new arrangement the fare to Bentleyville and Ellsworth will be 35 cents with a corresponding rate to the different zones between those points and Charleroi.

This step is being taken by the local companies because of the heavy increase in the cost of operating the lines. Costs have been mounting from year to year, and the point has now been reached where there must be a corresponding increase in the revenues if the lines and equipment are to be maintained in first class condition.

Showing, some of the heavy increases during the past, the company officials point to the fact that up to the first of April the employes were receiving 53 cents an hour; on that date they were given an increase of 10 per cent, which raised the rate to 59 cents an hour, and on May first another raise of 20 per cent made their wages 69 cents per hour or a total increase of 30 per cent.

Power has increased 65 per cent within recent months, while all the materials entering into the constructive work of thecompany, both the cars and lines, have increased from 63.24 per cent to 525 per cent. Axles which in 1914 cost them $16.54, cost them $28.13 in 1919 and $40.50 in 1920; car wheels cost $14.50 in 1914, $23.75 in 1919 and $36.75 in 1920; steel castings per pound in 1914 were .02; in 1919 they increased to .13 and now are .15; gears cost each $56.00 today, while in 1914 they cost $26.25 and in 1919 they were $48.80. Thus it is shown all through the various supplies the company is compelled to purchase in order to keep equipment fit for service.

These are facts which the companies submit to the public as reasons asking an increase over the fares now charged, but which may be largely minimized by the purchase of tickets.

TO EXTEND RETAINING WALL AT ALLENPORT

The E. M. Wichert Company, engineers and contractors of Pittsburg, have received a contract from the Pittsburg Steel Products company for the extension of the existing pump house and to build about 20 feet of the retaining wall at its plant, above Allenport. Work will begin on the improvement within a short time.

SUNDAY SCHOOL HOLDS AN ENJOYABLE OUTING

With the afternoon weather all that could be desired and a program of sports and exercises in which all had part, the Washington Avenue Presbyterian Sunday school came home from their picnic last evening, tired but happy. The members of the school used two street cars to transport the picnickers to and from Oakland park and both cars were crowded. The sports were in the hands of S. D. Hill, Miss Elizabeth Elliott and Mrs. Clifford Robertson. The following contestants won in the different events:

50-yard dash for primary, won by Charles Darby and Myrl Mitchener

50-yard dash for first and second year Juniors, won by McKinley Henderson and Ruth Faulks.

50-yard dash for third and fourth year Juniors, won by Ronald McKay and Katherine Harper.

Sack race won by Preston Robertson.

Men's 100-yard dash, won by Dr. Edwin McKay.

All women's race, won by Mrs. Russell Blythe.

In the tug of war for men, the team captained by S. D. Hill won. In the tug of war for women the team captained by Mrs. Loren Tope won. For boys the team captained by Walter Metz was the victor. James Dawson and S. D. Hill carried off the honors in quoit pitching.

A religious service was held at 7:30 conducted by Rev. Burson and following a ball game was staged between two teams captained by Bert Mitchell and Harold Metz. After an exciting contest, in which players of both teams starred, the game was called on account of darkness. While the crowd was large the day was passed without any accidents and all pronounced it one of the best outing days spent in recent years.

May Be Compelled To Use Truck Service Again

Due to the order recently issued by the Interstate Commerce Commission, which curtails the use of open top cars in general industries, and gives the coal trade the preference for a period of thirty days, a number of mills are again resorting to truck service for deliveries. Big trucks loaded with product both from Donora and Monessen are again becoming familiar sights, all of them loaded tocapocity, and all moving in the direction of Pittsburg. In many cases mills are compelled to stock products, because they cannot secure open top cars in which to make shipments.

At Donora the yards are again being piled full of wire and other products, and this condition will likely prevail until theembargo is lifted. Representatives of a number of industries were in Washington on Thursday, making an appeal to the Interstate Commerce Commission to modify the order, so that other industries other than the coal trade would have an opportunity to use this style of car. The Commission made no comment as to what action would be taken, but itwas asserted that if their decision is unfavorable an appeal will be taken to a higher tribunal. Industries which make a special appeal against theorder included those manufacturing or dealing in crushed stone, cement, sand, gravel, lime and general building contarctosrs.

It was asserted that many contractors would have to quit business and that many of them would be driven into bankruptcy unless there was some modification whereby asupply of open top cars was made available for present use. Unless there is a change made mills desiring to make deliveries will be compeled to use truck service, the same as during the period of unawful strikes, which tied up the freight traffic in many parts of the country.

SLIGHTLY INJURED WHEN HIT BY AUTO

Sarah Roddy, of Oakland avenue and Third street, was struck by an automobile at Third and McKean about 11 o'clock last night. With her sister she had just alighted from a street car. It was raining at the time, and she started to run, not noting the approach of an automobile driven by a young man named Riley. She ran directly in front of the machine and was knocked down. William Feeney, who was near by, took her to the office of Dr. Vieslet, who attended to her injuries. She was somewhat bruised but not badly injured.

A special patrol of state police is guarding the main highways in the vicinity of Greensburg and requiring every motorists to show proper credentials before permitting him to pass after midnight. Twenty-two owners and drivers of automobiles were assessed $14.40 by Justice Todd Truxal for infactions of the state highway regulations.

RECKLESS SHOOTING CAUSE OF INJURY

Arnold Rouda, aged 16, of Monessen, was the victim of reckless shooting last Sunday evening, and as a consequence is in the McKeesport hospital suffering from a gunshot wound in his right shoulder. The shot was fired by a boy named Fred Payne, also aged 16. Both boys were 16 years of age on Sunday and they were having a dual celebration, the Payne boy having a 38-calibre revolver which he was handling rather recklessly. He was warned to be more careful but in spite of this he fired another shot and the bullet found lodgment in the right shoulder of the Ronda boy.

About three years ago young Rouda met with an injury to his left wrist and H. Isberg, a former Monessen physician, treated the case, with the result that the boy lost his arm. Suit was brought against the physician and a verdict of $1,000 given against him. It was feared that the accident of Sunday might result in the Ronda boy losing his other arm, but an X-ray examination showed that no permanent injury is expected.

COURT REFUSES INJUNCTION TO CLOSE BRIDGE AT DONORA

This Step Taken Because of Increased Cost of Operation

WILL SELL 4 TICKETS FOR 25c

Judge James I. Brownson in an opinion handed down Thursday afternoon refuses an injunction in the suit brought by H. S. Miller and Walter S. Coatsworth, of Donora, partners, as Miller & Coatsworth, against J. Elmer Johnston, et. al., county commissioners of Washington county and others. The plaintiffs sought to restrain the authorities of Washington and Westmoreland counties from closing for a short time the Donora-Webster bridge on which the Ferris Engineering company is now laying a new floor.

The plaintiffs are taxi proprietors and conduct a business between Donora and Monessen, hauling workmen and others to and from work. They averred the closing of the bridge would mean irreparable loss to them and inconvenience to their patrons. The bridge is to be closed to vehicle traffic but not to pedestrians.

The court holds that under the law and facts there is nothing to justify the court in granting the injunction prayed for. The court finds that the closing of the bridge temporarily does not prevent the plaintiffs, from operating the busses over their regular routes, other than across the bridge, and that they may still run to either side of the closed bridge and transfer passengers across the bridge. The court is of the opinion that the plaintiffs' rights arenot prejudiced as to their motor bus license and that the Public Service Commission could not declare a forfeiture of their rights if they continued to serve the public in the manner above set forth.

The court expresses the opinion that it is a question whether a private party can maintain a bill against the officers in charge of a highway for the purpose of preventing an interruption of such party's traveling, in common with the general public, over the highway, even though it be alleged that the consequentially resulting inconvenience and loss in his business will be one special to the paintiff.

"It is clear," the court said, that these commissioners have lawful authority, in the exercise of the duties cast upon them by the statutes regulating such bridges to make these repairs, and should it be necessary so to do for the purpose of properly making the repairs to close the bridge temporarily, for a reasonable time, to that end."

I will collect that rent positively in advance and guarantee no vacancies. Clyde B. Cope, Real Estate and Insurance, 315 McKean avenue. 21-tf*

PACKET SERVICE IS AGAIN DELAYED

The steamer City of Charleston, which it was intended to place in the pocket trade on the Monongahela river, left Pittsburg on Thursday for Point Marion. This probably means that the steamer will not be entered in the local service, as advertised by a Pittsburg company. This will be quite a disappointment to a number of shippers.

PLANS TO ENFORCE DOG LICENSE LAW

Enforcement of the Pennsylvania dog license law in rural sections of Pennsylvania counties has gone ahead so vigorously that between 500 and 600 cases are pending against farmers who neglected or refused to take out licenses for their canines. It is expected at the department of agriculture, which has been directing the arrests, that the fines will be paid and the licenses taken out in most of these prosecutions without further action.

Over 20,000 copies of the dog license code, with instructions to policemen and constables, how to proceed, have been issued by the department in the last few weeks.

"JAKEY" DRINKER AND GUN TOTER PAROLED

Raymond Paxton, aged 21 years of California, was paroled on Thursday by the Washington county court, upon payment of costs amounting to $28.70 and a fine of $1. The young man had imbibed an overabundance of Jamaica ginger. He then proceeded to get a gun and use it in a threatening manner. He was arrested for carrying concealed weapons. The young man was advised that he must abstain from Jamaica ginger and other intoxicants, and must behave himself in a law-abiding manner, otherwise he will be taken into custody and sent to prison.

DUQUESNE ORDINANCE UPHELD BY COURT

The conviction of the six organizers and speakers of the American Federation of Labor who were fined $102 by Mayor George S. Crawford of Duquesne, last May, and sent to jail on their refusal to pay the fine, was sustained by Judge Kennedy of the Allegheny county courts in an opinion handed down on Thursday. The court reduced the fines to $25. The six organizers and speakers were found guilty at a hearing before Mayor Crawford of violating a Duquesne city ordinance, which makes it necessary to obtain a permit from the Mayor before a public meeting can be held in Duquesne.

ALL TOLD IN SHORT WORDS

Greatest Things of Human Life Expressed in Letters That Do Not Exceed Five in Number.

Writers who forever are striving to develop a vocabulary of long and ostentatious words to impress the dear reading public would do well to remember that the greatest things of human life are expressed by words of not more than five letters, writes E. P. in the Kansas Editor.

The word "I" claims first consideration under the classification. "I" contains the minimum as regards letters and, casting aside modesty, it stands above all things else with the human herd.

Passing on to words of two letters "do" and "if" immediately suggest themselves as being mighty factors in the daily grind of human affairs.

At the head of the list of three-letter words stands "the." Then comes "sex," the most essential of the essential. In this list, too, is "war," also "law" and "art." Continuing, a most disagreeable trio appears in "tax, owe and dun," each undeniably mixed up with man's little whirl. Then come two words of great argument, "wet" and "dry," and at the end the most complaint from kid with pie and "eat."

In words of four letters there are "life" itself and many of the most vital things of life—"love, home, food, work, news, rest, song, hair, bald golf, vote, bank, rent and coal."

Finally comes the five-letter group containing the beginning and the end of man's story—"birth, heart, blood faith, woman, money, child, mirth, drink (water, milk or tea, of course), dance, motor, train, paper, ouija, sleep, death and grave."

So why seek long words to tell the tales of life, when each big vital thing is short, when one must spell it, and gives the hint, "be brief, old Top, be brief!"

LIBRARY IN SMALL COMPASS

For more than 2,000 years carrier pigeons have been used to carry messages when no other means sufficed, and during the siege of Paris in 1871, when 363 birds were sent out from the city, one bird performed the almost incredible feat of carrying to the outside world, in one trip no fewer than 40,000 messages averaging 20 words each. This was 800,000 words, or the equivalent of five or six average novels.

It was accomplished by means of micro-copic photography, the message being first printed with ordinary type and then photographed and rephotographed until they had been reduced several hundred diameters. The final photographs were taken on films or pellicles of collodion, each of which about two inches square, contained 50,000 words. A dozen of these films rolled up in a quill, weighed but one-twenty-eighth of an ounce, and the messages could, of course, be read with a microscope, without the necessity of photographing and enlarging.

Under favorable conditions, and for comparatively short distances, pigeons have carried as much as three-quarters of an ounce. Using the photo-reducing method, it would therefore be possible for a single bird to carry messages equal in words to no fewer than 120 ordinary volumes.

Famous Swiss City.

St. Gall (Switzerland) is the noted embroidery seat of modern days and one of the most influential centers of Christian civilization in central Europe. The city owes its foundation to the Irish apostle Gallus who, in the year 614, founded a hermitage near the brook Steinach. In the resulting monastery of St. Gall the strict rules of the Irish church were enforced until 720, when those of St. Benedict were substituted by an abbot, Othmar. In 1061, the Abbot Norpert of St. Gall erected a convent on the Sitter river the place taking the name of Abbatis Cella-Appenzell, and the abbots of St Gall became the dominating influence in the land until the subsequently much-impressed mountaineers resorted to force and succeeded in shaking off their yoke.

Hythe, England, has played a prominent part in history since medieval or modern times in spite of the fact that few in this country had heard of it. It is one of the famous and often discussed Cinque ports which, strategically situated along the English channel and special feudal and political privileges and which today are especially preserved, in name at least, by a lord warden. These ports were the main source of supply for warships until after the year 1500, and upon them devolved in large part the duty of protecting England from the danger of foreign invasion.

Kama, a Hindu God of Love.

Kama is the Hindu god of love. In the Rig-Veda he springs from Brahma's heart. He is armed with a bow and arrows, the bow being of sugar cane, the bow string a line of bees, and each of the five arrows tipped with a different flower, supposed to conquer one of the five senses. He rides on a parrot or sparrow, attended by nymphs, one of whom bears his banner displaying the Makara, or a fish on a red ground. His wife is Rati (pleasure) or Priti (affection), his daughter Trisha (thirst or desire), and his son is Vasa (the unrestrained).

GOODYEAR

Cities Gave Names to Fabrics.

About the year 1329 the woolen trade of England became located at Worsted, about 15 miles from Norwich, and it was at this place that the manufacture of the twisted double thread woolen, afterwards called worsted, was first made, if not invented. Linsey-woolsey was first made at Linsey, and was for a long time a very popular fabric. Kerseymere takes its name from the village of Kersey, and the mere close by it, in the county of Suffolk.

Vast Size of the Sun.

It may surprise many people to learn that the sun, which is by no means a large star, as stars go, could easily contain within its boundaries the entire earth and moon and also the distance between them. In fact, three systems like that consisting of earth and moon could be strung out in a row through the center of the sun, without coming within 50,000 miles of his surface on either side.

Kossuth on Liberty.

But if you say "American liberty," and take that for your policy, I dare say the time will yet come when humanity will have to mourn over a new proof of the ancient truth, that without community national freedom is never sure. You should change "American liberty" into "Liberty"—then liberty would be forever sure in America.—Louis Kossuth.

Couldn't Get the Idea.

Elmer's father had purchased a hunting dog which he called a setter, and the boy was greatly interested in it. After a few days of observation, however, he announced: "I don't see why you call him a setter. He never sits; he's always either standing or on the run."

Girls Once Under Lock and Key.

In ancient Athens girls lived in the strictest seclusion till their marriage, kept virtually under lock and key. They were seldom permitted to leave their homes, except on some great festal occasion.

Powerless Knowledge.

Gee! but it's a pity a man never can dispose of his motor experience for as much as it cost him. If he could, what a lot of ready-money guys there would be running around loose.—American Motorist.

Charity.

How many things might be tolerated in peace and left to conscience, had we but charity, and were it not the chief stronghold of our hypocrisy to be ever judging one another.—John Milton.

RAILROAD TRESPASSERS

The fatal accident at Donora which occurred Wednesday evening, and which resulted in the death of three small boys and great grief to their families, again serves to call attention to a condition which is giving railroad officials a great deal of concern.

These boys were trespassers, although innocent of any intent on their part to do injury to the property on which they were at the time they were killed. One story says they were playing with a ball at the time, while another account says they were crossing the tracks. Which ever one is true, it does not relieve the situation, for they were in a place they had no business to be. The train which ran them down makes the run from Monongahela to Donora in eight minutes, and consequently must maintain high speed in order to make the schedule. When the engineer nd firemen saw the boys on the track it was too late to stop. The boys were directly in line of the onrushing engine, and the result was instant death.

Only a few weeks ago a little girl, aged about six years, was killed by a shifter in the Donora yards. With other children she had been playing about the tracks and when tired sat down on the step located at the rear of the fender. When the engine moved the child was thrown under the wheels and crushed to death.

Railroad officials have become alarmed at the situation, and it is promised there will be astricter supervision over the railroad right of way than ever before. Officers have been instructed to prevent people using thetracks as a highway and the result is likely to be a number of arrests, but the railroad officials are determined to break up the practice if possible. In Charleroi the habit prevails just as much as in other towns along thevalley, and those who wish to avoid being taken up as a trespasser had better keep to the streets and the highways. The railroad company has no desire to maim or injure people, and at the same time it wants the unrestricted use of its right of way, to which it is been in the habit of using the railroad tracks for highways had better be careful in the future—it may save trouble.

SAVING THE HIGHWAYS

The people of Pennsylvania are thoroughly converted to the idea that good roads pay. But construction costs are so very high, and deliveries of material so hard to get, that it will be impossible to do all the work this year that the people had hoped for.

Meanwhile motorists and truck drivers can do something to save the roads already in existence. The following suggestions are respectfully offered:

Don't drive too fast. It is the speeders who pull up the road surface.

Turn corners and curves at moderate speed. The worst grind on the surface occurs when the wheels are turning.

Don't let ruts develop. If you see a regular track forming, keep out of it.

Don't feel that you must drive in the center of the road. Keep to oreside and you will be safer and help distribute thetraffic. General attention to a few common sense rules like these would lessen highway taxes for everybody.

JOHNSON IN LINE

Senator Johnson of California is unequivocally for the Republican ticket and the Republican platform. He sets forth his reasons in a clear and convincing statement, and there need be no doubt as to where he stands in this great political contest. The attitude of Senator Johnson is one that his friends expected him to take. He is too broad-minded a man to be "miffed" because of the result of the Chicago convention—he may have been disappointed at the outcome, but Senator Johnson has a greater future in the Republican party than can be offered as the leader of a third-party movement, which the Democrats hoped he would head.

If the Democracy want a third party furnish thecandidates—and some of movement they have plenty of sound material in their own party to furnish thecandidates—and some of them are of national prominence.

It used to be when we saw a long haired man that we sized him up as either a fiddler, a poet or a tramp. Now we take it that hehasn't the priceof a hair cut.

TATTOOING AS A FINE ART

It Reached Its Highest Development in the Marquesas Islands of the South Seas.

Tattooing is an art so old that its origin is lost to historical records having been practiced when the cavemen went out to club their fellows. In the Marquesas Islands, the most distant and most mysterious of South sea archipelagos, tattooing reached its highest development and there it was the most beautiful form of art known.

For a man in the Marquesas to lack the tattooed stars of terror upon his face and to have a bare countenance upon his face was to be a paltroon and despised by the whole tribe. Frederick O'Brien says in the Century that to achieve a fairly complete picture on one's body meant many months of intense suffering and the expenditure of much wealth.

When white men were cast by shipwreck in the islands of the far Pacific or fled from duty on whalers or warships and sought to stay among the Marquesans they acceded to the honored customs of their hosts and adopted their facial adornment. Once the curious ink of the tattooer has gotten into the skin it is there forever and can never be erased, like the pits of smallpox. The white men, therefore, of Europe and America never again returned to their old homes after settling among these Marquesans and having their faces tattooed.

EGYPTIAN BEADS MOVE BED

Remarkable Manifestations Said to Have Been Made by Ancient Necklace in Edinburgh.

Some remarkable manifestations, states the Scotsman, have occurred in Edinburgh in association with an ancient Egyptian necklace. The present owner of the necklace, who lives in the west end of Edinburgh, received it from Cairo at the end of 1913.

Recently she decided to get rid of it and threw it into a waste paper basket. That night when near the basket she was startled by the distinct feeling of a hand clutching at her wrist. She afterward heard sounds from the basket as a mouse moving. Examination revealed only waste paper and the glass beads.

She gave the beads to her brother, who on going to bed placed them on the pillow near his head. The necklace seemed to be moved on the pillow during the night by some unseen agency. A night or two later he again put the beads on his bed. He was roused from his sleep by the bed being moved from side to side. He afterward heard the necklace producing a rustling movement. The following night he slept soundly with the necklace in the room. At four o'clock next morning he was wakened by the bed again shaking. Other persons say they had similar experiences with the beads.

George Eliot the Lay Preacher.

A novelist who bases his art on clean-cut ethical formulas is bound to wane in popularity. For special reasons, he may make a strong appeal to his own generation and yet be neglected by the generation succeeding. George Eliot was the eloquent lay preacher of her age. Literary sermons like hers are now out of date. Readers do not care to be told what will happen if they do not do this or if they do that. Similarly Thomas Hardy is certain to suffer in fame. The kind of philosophic determination embodied in his novels is disappearing. If Hardy and George Eliot long survive, it will be in spite of their moral formulas: it will be because readers will be willing to overlook moral formulas on account of the permanently interesting phases of life presented by a master hand in their novels. Herein lies the final test of literary immortality. There is no question about novels like "Tom Jones" and "Vanity Fair," which are not framed on any precise technical theory. They are life itself and its diffused morality.—Wilbur Cross, in the Yale Review.

In the twentieth century, according to the report of forward movement survey, there are approximately 120 million people in Africa held in abject fear through the hundreds of thousands of witch doctors who alone are believed to have the power of "spelling out" the evil spirits. The theory of the African native regarding disease is that an enemy casts a spell which enters the body and it must either be spelled out or cast out and this is accomplished by the use of charms which often kill before they have the opportunity of proving their curative powers. The natives of South Africa, the survey finds, depend entirely on witch doctors and herb doctors. For 8½ million native people there are only twenty-three missionary doctors and nineteen nurses. Scattered among the millions, this little band of workers accomplishes wonders. But the sway of the witch doctors is practically unaffected.

Electric Incubator.

The electric incubator is said to be much safer, surer and more economical than the oil-heated apparatus. Current entering the incubator passes through resistance elements in the top of the box; these are arranged to distribute the heat evenly over the eggs below. Double insulating walls prevent the escape of heat, while a thermostat keeps temperature constant. Ventilation is likewise automatic.

NEEDED A THOROUGH SOUSING

Evil Spirit of Hackman Could Not Be Exorcised Except by Most Stringent Methods.

Doctor Brown, a negro evangelist, was a firm believer in the ancient custom of river baptism, and converts whom he baptized in this manner seldom forgot it. A few years ago he held a christening in a New Jersey town on the banks of the Delaware river, where a dozen or more converts were assembled, awaiting their turns to be immersed. Among them was a hackman, who evinced a lively interest in the ceremony.

"Why does the good doctor," he asked of a fellow convert, "duck some of them folks two times an' others more?"

"He ducks 'em once," explained his friend, "for every new name they're goin' to have."

"Is that possible?" the hackman replied. "I was goin' to call myself Thomas Jefferson Lincoln Anderson, but I guess 'Tom' will be 'bout long 'nuff."

This conversation was overheard by the sharp ears of Doctor Brown, who finally beckoned the hackman to come forward.

"Yo' name, please?" he inquired in a deep bass voice.

"Jess baptize me 'Tom,' that's 'nuff," the candidate replied, as the evangelist, taking him none too gently by the neck, piloted him far out into the stream where he ducked him not once but half a dozen times with such rapidity and vigor that a few minutes later the hackman found himself on the shore, coughing, sputtering and fighting for breath. The ceremony was soon over, and when he had recovered his strength he made his way to the side of Doctor Brown.

"What fo' you duck me dat way?" he demanded in aggrieved tones. "I come here to be baptized, not to be drowned."

"My good man," replied Doctor Brown, "you was so filled with the devil I had to use a powerful lot of water to wash him out of yo' system."

SCUTARI HAS LONG HISTORY

Known as "Geneva of the Balkans" It Is One of the Oldest Cities in Europe.

Scutari, principal city of Albania, scenically suggests Geneva, nestling between the limpid waters of Lake Scutari and the mountains of northern Albania, snow-capped for the greater part of the year, rising to form an Alp-like background. Instead of being a city of highly organized industry and industrious and frugal artisans, Scutari has been scarred by sword, earthquake and flood.

To reach Scutari from any Montenegrin town, on the north side of Lake Scutari, one boards a "londra," the sharp-pointed prow and stern rising high out of the water. Oarsmen propel it by short, quick jerks, often accompanying their strokes by a wild barbaric chant. The gondola-like boats on Lake Scutaria are accounted for by the Venetian influence that is evidenced in Scutari.

Scutari is one of the oldest cities in Europe, having been the seat of the Illyrian kings, ten centuries before Christ, and as the descendants of the ancient tribes the Albanians have a lineage far older than most European nationals. The world war brought the Albanians into sudden contact with modern ideals and they won admiration for fine physique and keen minds, unimpaired by soft living.

One Good Time.

I think my most embarrassing moment took place one lovely night last summer. I was engaged to be married and decided to have one good time with an old friend of mine. I canceled my intended husband's date, complaining of a sick headache, and went out joy riding. I explained the circumstances to my friend, so we decided to go to a bathing beach some distance away to take a plunge in the lake. We were having a grand and glorious time swimming and diving when lo! who should stand on the pier but my future husband. You can imagine my agony when my friend called to me, "Say, May, dive with me once more; then we'll have lunch."—Exchange.

According to the Puranas of Hindu mythology the earth is circular and flat, like the flower of a water lily. Its circumference is 4,000,000,000 miles. In the center is Mount Soomeroo. On this mountain are three peaks formed of gold, pearls and precious stones, where the deities reside. At its base are three mountains on each of which grows a tree 8,000 miles high. The furthermost country from these mountains is bounded by the salt sea. Beyond this sea there are six others—of sugar cane-juice, of spirituous liquors, of clarfied butter, or curds, of milk and nectar. Each sea is surrounded by a separate continent.

Zodiacal Signs and Vegetation.

Zodiacal signs have no influence whatever upon vegetation. A fruitful season is one in which the climatic conditions, such as temperature and precipitation, have been of the nature to produce the best possible results. There is a great variation in these conditions, although coincident with the return of the same zodiacal sign. The same sign coincides with the abnormal summer as well as with the normal, and the same remark applies to any other season.

"CAVEMAN" STUFF ALL RIGHT

Now, she is a very sarcastic young woman, and the man who wishes to marry her is often much tormented with her ability to say things which make him distinctly uncomfortable. One night one of his friends and he decided to go to a picture house and there they saw a play in which the caveman stuff was exceedingly strong. Evidently that gave the young man an inspiration, for the next cutting remark the young woman made he resented.

He had come to take her for a drive. After getting her safely settled in his car and having placed a large box of candy in her lap he settled down for a pleasant evening. But not long. The young woman could not stand his ease. She deliberately opened her box, took out a bonbon, nibbled at it a minute and then said in icy tones: "Why, this candy is stale."

At first the young man felt inclined to writhe, but the next minute the caveman stuff of the movie darted into his mind. He did what he thought was a real rough act. He seized that beautiful box of candy and threw it as far as he could.

For a long time there was silence. Then the girl began the conversation. And this time she spoke meekly and in "honied" tones. She is still speaking in the same way whenever she is with him.—Indianapolis News.

MUSHROOMS OF ALL SORTS

Edible and Poisonous, While One Species, Grown in Africa, Is Worshiped as a God.

In or about the edges of woods one occasionally comes across an unpleasant-looking umbrella-shaped mushroom with a red or orange-colored top that is covered with a slimy exudation. Now and then strange to say, people eat it. They die.

Its slime is very attractive to flies. They gather upon it, and they die. In Europe this species of mushroom is used as a substitute for fly-paper.

The horrible-smelling "clathrus" mushroom is believed in France to cause cancer. French people call it the "cancer mushroom." Another species, which grows on olive trees, is so luminous at night that one can see to read by it.

Other kinds of mushrooms are used for making ink, for stanching the flow of blood and (in Lapland) for killing bedbugs. A European species is employed to stupefy bees, and certain "puffballs" are said to have anesthetic properties. Tribes of semi-savages in northeastern Asia utilize a mushroom for snuff. But most curious of all is the Polyporus sacer, which in Africa is worshiped as a god.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

Valuable Shrub.

One may look for an increased cultivation of the so-called Guatemalan "jocote maranon" (anacardium occidentale), which is quite common in that country. It has been found that incisions in the trunk cause it to exude a resinous secretion that dissolves like gum arabic, and that is highly useful for pasting purposes. Used in the binding of books, it possesses, beside its adhesive qualities, the added virtue of keeping away moths, because of its acrid odor. There is also obtained, from the same plant, a caustic oil, which turns black when it strikes the air. This has been found excellent in the treatment of furniture. The seeds of the fruit are roasted and eaten, as well as used for various dishes. An 18 per cent extract of oil is made, which is said by connoisseurs to merit comparison with the best of sweet almonds. According to the newspaper Excelsior of Guatemala the cultivation of the shrub provides a business of increasing profitableness.

It has been found that soot acts as a disinfectant, and is more active moist than dry. Water seems to dissolve the disinfecting agents in the soot making them more active. Carbon floating in the air seldom, if ever, carries bacteria unless it has lodged on the ground and is again blown into the air.

Now soot acts as a very effective blanket, protecting the bacteria and giving them a chance to grow. Diseases of the nose and throat are not appreciably more prevalent in smoky cities, but they are more severe and harder to cure. This is probably due as much to the cracking of the mucous membrane by the change from the dry atmosphere in the houses to the moist air outside and subsequent irritation by dust and smoke.

America's Debt to Eads.

In nearly four centuries the names of many men have become linked historically with the "Big Muddy." De Soto discovered it, Marquette, LaSalle and Hennepin were among its explorers. Mark Twain was its Homer. But James Buchanan Eads saddled it and curbed it to serve mankind. His record is unique in the engineering annals of America, with the mighty river submissive in his power. He was the first to pry into its depths, to sound its secrets, wrest from it its sunken treasures; the first to build for it the first ironclads in the western hemisphere, to have swung a great bridge across it midway its length and, as the greatest achievement of all, to have compressed its channel at the mouth so that it cut a ship's way to the sea.

MADE TOMBSTONE OF ROCK

Probably New Yorker Will Investigate Before He Carves His Name on Another Boulder.

It was quite a while before a prominent lawyer in New York related to his friends a personal experience which he had one summer when, being somewhat run down in health, he went into the Adirondacks to rest.

One day, as he was wandering aimlessly through the woods, he came upon a huge boulder not far from the railroad that runs along the shore of a lake. Listlessly he began to carve his name on the rock, but gradually warmed to the task and chiseled zealously away until he had wrought both name and date with various embellishing flourishes.

As he was proudly surveying the result of his labor, an elderly backwoodsman appeared on the scene. After the customary greeting, he dexterously shifted his pack to the ground, then with a somewhat quizzical air surveyed the lawyer's work.

"Quite a bit of art you've got there," he observed gravely.

The lawyer accepted this tribute complacently.

"Kind of curious how things come about," he went on. "Now, the first time a train was run into these here woods it come in contact with a tramp, long about here; and right there boulder marks the spot where we buried him. Now, here he is provided with a first-class tombstone and an inscription that anybody might be proud of. Kinder curious, ain't it?"

MOST POPULAR GIVEN NAME

"John," or Its Derivative, Common in All Languages—Explaining Size of Jones Family.

John is the most common given or Christian name we have. Its history is curious. It came originally from the Hebrew Jehohannen, "God is gracious." The Greeks made it Johanan, and in the feminine it became Anna and Hannah. The name was unknown in Saxon England and was seldom used among the Normans. In the Doomsday book, the record of the inhabitants of England which William the Conqueror had compiled, only two Johns are listed, and one of them is a Dane. The German form is Hans, and sometimes Johan. From these we have the surnames Hanson and Johanson. The diminutive is found in Hanks, Hankin, Hankinson, Jankin, Jenkins, Jenson and Jennings. Shane is the Irish form of John and Jean the French. Considering the popularity of the name John and the fact that at this time it was spelled "J-o-n" and pronounced "Jone," the size of the Jones family will be explained. The name means "son of John." John Jones is found in almost every community.

Ancient Bricks Well Made.

Of the durability of the ancient bricks the remains of ancient walls and courses that go back to prehistoric times bear witness. So strong are the well-made sun-dried bricks that they are found as a foundation many courses deep, beneath the portentous stone work of ancient temples. The remains of the ancient town, now known as El Kab, still exist, with a wall constructed entirely of such bricks, still a solid mass. These bricks now, as in ancient days, are made with mud from the Nile and chaff, not straw, but the admixture was by no means always required, as the Nile mud differed considerably in different places, and in second-rate brickmaking the mixture of "tibu" or chaff was not used. But in great works, such as the greater wall inclosing the temple group of Karnak which was made under the impulse of the government at the time, this chaff was always used.

A sea grass that grows abundantly about the shores of Japan has been found to yield fiber which, properly mixed with cotton, forms a thread much cheaper and stronger than one of all cotton. The process of removing the rind of the weed, which has been patented by its Japanese inventor, is to dry the plant, boil it in lye for two hours and cool slowly. Washing it in water then separates most of the coverings, and the rest comes off when it is soaked in water containing rice bran and brought to the boiling point. The resulting fiber, after rinsing, resembles cotton, and is ready for use. The grass is harvested in the fall and the fiber can be prepared by fishermen. It is expected to have a marked effect on the price of cheap clothing, and to improve the durability of fishing nets.

Meredith and Lady Macbeth.

Lady Butcher in her "Memories of George Meredith," recently published, gives the world not a little new information about the novelist which is both significant and extremely entertaining. Here is one of the passages she quotes from her diary which shows his amazing power to paint with words:

"Mr. Meredith went with father and me to see Irving and Mrs. Crowe (nee Esteman) in 'Macbeth.' During supper he explained the acting of the sleep-walking scene to mother, and wishing to describe the way that Lady Macbeth pushed the palms of her hands from nose to ear, he said: 'My dear Mrs. Brandreth, I assure you that she came through her hands like a corpse stricken with mania in the act of resurrection!'"—From "Book Gossip."

Lemons.

Many persons may not know that the scent and flavor of lemon peel reside in minute cells, close to the surface of the fruit, and that by slicing it thin they will cut through these innumerable cells and thus obtain double the quantity of the essential oil that could be procured by anyone careless of this fact. The cells being cut through, it follows that a great part of the oil remains on the white of the lemon. This is easily abstracted by rubbing a lump of sugar over it.

Must Sleep or Die.

Quoth Sir Thomas Browne, "One-half our days we pass in the shadow of the earth and the brother of Death extracteth a third part of our lives." Why should we give so many hours to sleep? For the purpose, we suppose, of giving the body rest. But during the sleep no physical or mental function is entirely at rest. We do not know why we must sleep, we only know we must sleep or die."

Didn't Want to Miss Anything.

Monday a peddler came to our door and was demonstrating some of his wares to my mother. My mother bought a few articles from him and he started to put his suitcase in order. He finished and was just leaving when Joseph, who is four years old, rushed in and asked: "Oh, mamma, what did the man say while I wasn't here?"—Chicago American.

Cats a Source of Danger.

Cats are great carriers of disease germs, and scratches from their claws are sources of real danger, as those claws are generally coated with a mass of germs which may cause infection, and for these reasons alone should not be allowed to associate too intimately with young children whether the latter are asleep or awake.

Materials in Wren's Nest.

The wren carries a lot of material to the box or hole cavity in which the nest is constructed. If the box in which wrens are building is a foot square they will fill it full of material—straw and grass and hair and fiber of one kind or another. They do not use any mud, as the robins do.

PICTURESQUE IN ITS INERTIA

The town of Cajamarca, nestled among the Andes mountains is, perhaps, the most unambitious community in the world, according to Harry A. Franck, who writes in the Wide World Magazine.

Cajamarca is very old, he says. The Spaniards found it when they conquered the country centuries ago but nothing of the old Inca civilization remains, and the oldest buildings are the churches that the conquerors erected. Today, says Mr. Franck, the churches stand architecturally incomplete, not because time has demolished them but because, according to local tradition, a finished structure in colonial days had to pay tribute to the government, and so the builders economized by stopping work before the churches were finished.

It is a town where the upper class is distinguished by wearing collars and shoes and performing no manual labor, where the "lower class" is ragged and poverty-stricken, and where life goes on from year to year in a state of inertia which nobody seems to find undesirable. The unfinished churches give the old town a picturesque aspect, being built of stone and colored by the passage of time until they remind a traveler of the ancient Spanish edifices of Salamanca; nor is there any present likelihood that the town will grow rich enough to spoil their picturesque incompleteness by finishing them.

And not in a century, says the latest visitor from the outside world, has there been born in that town a "boy with the initiative and energy to tramp three days over the western range, and grow away for some place where he could make a man of himself."

JOHNSON NOT FIRST IN FIELD

Contrary to Wide Belief, There Was an English Dictionary Before He Compiled His.

The oldest English dictionary is not that by Doctor Johnson, as so many appear to think. There were many such lexicons before his day, and the earliest of them all was Dr. John Williams's "An Alphabetical Dictionary," appended to the author's "Essay Toward a Real Character and a Philosophical Language," published in 1668.

Everybody seems to know that the first printed London directory appeared in 1677, frequent notices in the press being accountable for much, but how many are aware that the art of living in London was first reduced to a science by Roger Crab, who in 1655 published a book, the first of its kind ever seen, in which he discourses at length on the scandalous extravagance of all who expended more than three farthings per week upon their food.

The earliest attempt to introduce phonetic spelling is afforded, so far as is known, by Butler's "Feminine Monarchy," first published at Oxford in 1609, and the "Polygraphia" of Trithemius, 1518, furnished the first attempt at secret writing.

The earliest collection of maps of England and Wales is found in the work of Christopher Saxton, which first saw the light in the days of Elizabeth. The maps number 35, and were published separately between 1573 and 1579, when a title and index were added and the whole series published in book form.—Bookman's Journal and Print Collector.

Kinds of Stage Humor.

The French, who have an armory of critical terms both more exact and more abundant than ours, distinguish between three different kinds of stage humor. Brander Matthews writes in Munsey's. There is, first of all, the mere witticism, the sentence laughable in itself, the so-called "epigram;" and this they term the "mot de'esprit." Second, there is the phrase which derives its comic effect not from itself, but from its utterance at a given moment in the movement of the story; and this they term the "mot d'esprit." situation." Thirdly, there is the word or sentence whereby a character expresses himself unexpectedly and characteristically, unconsciously turning the flashlight on the unexplored recesses of his own soul; and they are wont to call this the "mot de caractere."

In the Middle ages people had recourse to love filters, magical invocations, prayers, fastings and the like, which were modified according to the country and the individual. A girl had only to agitate the water in a bucket of water with her hand, or to throw broken eggs over another person's head, if she wished to see the image of the man she should marry. If a bridal party met a monk on going to the church the union could not be happy. A priest, a dog, cat, lizard or serpent were equally unfortunate, while a spider, a toad or a wolf augured that all would go well. How the ring came to be used is not well known, as it did not occupy its present position in former times.—Chicago Journal.

Counterfeit Reason

"Yes, I still have the first five dollar note that I made," said the gray-haired passenger.

"Good gracious!" exclaimed his traveling acquaintance, "how did you keep it so long?"

"Well, it was very imperfect, being my first, and I'd have had trouble in passing it."

CO. A MUSTERED INTO FEDERAL SERVICE

Major McKelvy. of the United States regular Army, mustered Company A, 10th Infantry, N. G. P., of Monongahela, into the federal service Thursday evening. Capt. Gee has made requisition for equipment for 90 men, and expects to receive these outfits within a few days. The Company leaves for camp about the 29th of July.

When crops look badly, high prices are predicted because of short production, and when they look well. high prices are predicted because of a scarcity of labor.

About the only difference between a burglar and a profiteer is, that the burglar is ashamed of his work and wears a mask.

Peculiar Will Upheld.

An elderly Frenchman was found dead in his house at Doumely in the Ardennes. A search among his papers failed to reveal any will until, under his bed, a piece of sheetiron was discovered, with these words written on it in white chalk: "I bequeath all my property to the borough of Ardennes on condition that the mayor gives £12 to the local fire brigade for a beanfest. (Signed) ——." The relatives disputed this queer and very brief will, but the local court decided that it was valid.

Do Kindly Act Gracefully.

Manners are the ornament of action; and there is a way of speaking a kind word, or of doing a kind thing, which greatly enhances their value. What seems to be done with a grudge, or as an act of condescension, is scarcely accepted as a favor. Yet there are men who pride themselves upon their gruffness; and though they may possess virtue and capacity, their manner is often such as to render them almost insupportable.—Samuel Smiles.

All the Conveniences.

The folks had advertised our house for sale, but when a young couple came to look at the house I was the only one home. I opened the new refrigerator and boasted of it as if it were a part of the house. The couple looked at me in wonder and then burst out laughing. Can you blame them? It's a wonder I didn't tell them what fine tricks my dog could do.—Chicago Tribune.

The Gulf Stream.

The gulf stream is the result of the general vertical circulation of the ocean, bringing from the north the denser cold water which sinks below, while the warm water from the equatorial region rises and slides northward above the cold current; the deviation of these currents to the right, giving the surface current a northeasterly direction.

Evil Always in Hatred.

A man should not allow himself to hate even his enemies because if you indulge in this passion on some occasions, it will rise of itself in others; if you hate your enemies you will contract such a vicious habit of mind, as by degrees will break out upon those who are your friends, or those who are indifferent to you.—Plutarch.

Should Be Universal Custom.

One of the most important industrial problems of the day is that of obtaining coke from the so-called "non-coking" coals. Thus far the mystery of why certain kinds of coal yield coke while others do not has never been fully solved.

RESEMBLES THE HUMAN HAND

Skin of Bat's Wing Stretches From the Finger Tips to Ends of Toes and Nails.

The wing of a bat is a most wonderful instance of adaptation to a special end for it is nothing but a greatly modified forelimb or hand.

If you spread out your hand and imagine the four fingers grown enormously long, while the thumb remains short and stumpy and that the skin between the fingers has also been stretched until it extends from tip to tip of the fingers and on along the side of the body to join the hind foot, you will have a good idea of the structure of a bat's wing; it is simply a much exaggerated hand.

The elongated bones serve, like the ribs of an umbrella, to keep the skin stretched and taut when the owner is in flight.

When the bat alights it doubles up its "hands," the skin falls in wrinkly folds and using its thumb joints as forefeet it is able to run about almost as quickly as a mouse.

The skin of the wings not only joins the long bones but extends from them to the tail, thus making the rudder with which the bat can steer when flying, and, when the tail is brought up beneath the body, forms a bag or receptable which is of use to its owner.

CREDITS TREES WITH SENSE

Scientist Declares They Possess at Least Three Which Also Belong to Human Race.

The curator of the British Guiana museum, James Rodway, who is an eminent botanist, declares that plants possess at least three of our five senses—feeling, taste and smell—and that certain tropical trees smell water from a distance, and will move straight toward it.

But trees not in the tropics can do as well. A resident of an old Scotch mansion found the waste pipe from the house repeatedly choked. Lifting the slabs in the basement paving he discovered that the pipe was completely encircled by poplar roots. They belonged to a tree that grew some thirty yards away on the opposite side of the house.

The roots had moved steadily toward the house, and had penetrated below the foundation and across the basement until they reached their goal, the waste pipe, 150 feet away. Then they had pierced a cement joining and had worked their way in long, tapering lengths inside the pipe for a considerable distance beyond the house. There seems something almost human in such unerring instinct and perseverance in surmounting obstacles.—New York Post.

Sheep-Raising Industry.

Sheep raising is perhaps the oldest of all industries, for it was practiced even before agriculture. Wool is a product of cultivation or domestication for there are no wild animals which closely resemble the wool bearing sheep. Floyd W. Parsons, in the Saturday Evening Post, says that with the discovery that cloth could be made from wool came an effort to improve the fleece by selection and breeding. The early Romans were most successful in this pursuit, and their endeavors along this line resulted in developing a fleece of great fineness. After the conquest of the Iberian peninsula Roman sheep were introduced into Spain, where they so greatly improved the native flocks that even during Roman supremacy Spanish wool led the world's markets a prestige held for many centuries.

TellTale Faces.

"Nature seems to decide in advance, by face and gesture, what many people are best fitted for." That is the theory of Dr. Henry Chellew, who holds that by studying the faces of children, parents and teachers may obtain valuable guidance as to their future careers. The following list is a brief summary of some of his deductions: Triangular full face—Essentially a mental type. Unromantic, strenuous, eats little; thinks much. Feels little, sleeps little. Usually makes good accountant or engineer. Round full face—Essentially a vital character. Sentimental, easy-going; sleeps and eats all the time, does little work. Makes usually a good mathematician. Pointed profile (such as the Chamberlain family)—Uncompromising, inclined to procrastination.

In Old New York.

Chelsea, in the neighborhood of Twenty-third street and North river, New York city, was the home of Clement C. Moore, who wrote the childhood classic, "'Twas the Night Before Christmas." One of the admirable old houses of Chelsea is that where dwelt Edwin Forrest, the actor. It is at 436 West Twenty-second street, a substantial-looking square fronted house, with a door of a great single panel. On the spot where the New York city hall stands, George Washington paraded his little army on a July day in 1775, and with grave solemnity a document was read to them that had just been received from Philadelphia, and which was forever to be known as the Declaration of Independence.

Largest Bible.

The largest Bible in the world is more than five feet two inches high and three feet six inches wide. When opened flat it measures seven feet ten inches across. It is intended for use in a special religious movement.

ANNAPOLIS FOUNDED IN 160[illegible]

Nova Scotia Earliest Colonized Land in North America, With Exception of St. Augustine.

Nova Scotia may lay claim to being the earliest colonized land in North America, with the exception of St. Augustine, Fla., where the Spanish establishment was made as early as 1565. Port Royal, now the little town of Annapolis, was founded in 160[illegible] three years before the English settled at Jamestown. The brave French pioneers found it necessary to suspend their colony for three years, but the settlement was re-established in 1610 by a group of Acadians.

The Acadians were in almost constant conflict with the English. The colony fell into the hands of the English twice, and was each time returned to the French before the English finally captured it in 1710. The Acadian remained steadfast in their hopes that French rule would some day return, but their hope was destined never to be realized. They, however, persisted in maintaining their identity even against the English insistence that they abandon their allegiance to their mother country.

The descendants of the Acadians, numbering 300,000, are to be found in Maryland, Virginia, the Carolinas, Georgia and Louisiana. When the Acadians were expelled from the Basin of Monas, Grand Pre, when they refused to take the oath of fealty to the English sovereign in 1755, many of them escaped to the wilderness and later drifted back to their former homes only to find them occupied by new settlers from New England states.

DEEP RESPECT FOR SABBATH

Writer's Recollection of How Day Used to Be Observed When He Was a Small Boy.

My mother was born and reared in a little country village in western New York. On the farm where my grandmother lived, it was the custom to begin Sunday on Saturday night at sundown. The "hired man" came in from the chores, grandmother put away all her work in the kitchen, and then the entire family gathered in the best room and studied the Sunday school lesson, or had a reading from the Bible, led by grandfather, and all the family retired not later than nine o'clock.

In the morning after doing none but the absolutely necessary chores on the farm, the team that had not been used the day before was hitched up to the big four-seated wagon and the entire family, including the "hired" help, went to church. There was preaching service in the forenoon, and then we adjourned to a lunch for ourselves and the team. Then we went in to a Sunday school service, and after an interval there was another preaching service, after which we hitched up and drove slowly back to the farm.

That was the way Sunday was kept in western New York a little more than fifty years ago. I can remember hearing my mother say that when she was a girl in the same New York state village, she was not allowed to walk except to the cemetery and back on Sunday, and was not allowed to read any books except the Bible and "Fox's Book of Martyrs."—Christian Herald.

Rebuilding Guatemala City.

Guatemala city, in the republic of the same name, which was the scene of one of the most violent earthquakes in Central American history, during the latter months of 1917 and the early part of 1918, is now being gradually rebuilt.

Guatemala was for centuries the home of the Maya-Quiche Indians. At Quirigua are located some of the most remarkable ruins in the Americas—monoliths resembling Egyptian obelisks, from the top of which gigantic faces stare at the intruder. Excavations in the vicinity have revealed the ground plan of what must have been a remarkable and imposing temple. A bulletin of the National Geographic society states that in the mountains of southwestern Guatemala live pure blooded Indians who are known for their physique, cleanliness and scrupulous honesty.

The Grisons, Switzerland's largest canton, may readily be described as an Alpine wonderland. It is broken by no fewer than 150 valleys, varying greatly in size, traversed by wild rushing torrents and streams and animated by roaring waterfalls and transparent mountain lakes. Dark green fir woods and velvety pastures cover the slopes and form the transition from the region of the hills to the realm of the high Alps. And in this radiant paradise of vales and mountains there stands on almost every height a little place of worship, an emblem of peace and good will, sending greetings far and wide.

Ancient H. C. L.

The H. C. L. is no brand new phenomenon of our own day. It was old as far back as the second year of King Darius, about 520 B. C.

"Ye have sown much," Haggai, an orator of his time, taunted his townsmen, "and bring in little; ye eat, but ye have not enough; ye drink, but ye are not filled with drink; ye clothe you, but there is none warm; and he that earneth wages earneth wages to put it into a bag with holes."

Haggai's platform, his scheme for reducing that H. C. L., was the building of a new temple.

Constantinople.

Within its girdling walls Constantinople rises, like Rome on its seven low hills, crowned by the splendors of mosques, whose gleaming cupolas and minarets, silhouetted against the blue sky, look down on the waters of the Bosporus. A strange, incongruous huddle of palatial buildings and tumble-down hovels, of stately avenues, and filth-littered lanes, flanked by malodorous bazars, through which the human tide streams and surges.

Private Park.

If the rear yard is properly planted with a border of flowering shrubs and perennial flowers, has a velvety green lawn and a few shade or fruit trees, it will give the family a quiet, peaceful little private park, in which all can enjoy the moonlight during the hot summer evenings without making a long, tiresome trip to the parks. This is the height of pleasure afforded by a well-planted home yard.

Influence of Art.

Jud Tunkins says the moving pictures have shown so many different phases of life that he can't get a man to hoe corn who doesn't put on airs like an actor.

Turquoise Talisman of Safety.

Among army officers in some of the European countries the custom still prevails of wearing a ring set with turquoise as a talisman against a violent death.

Dangers in Quinine.

Many cases of malaria are really quinine poisoning. The amount of quinine administered is often large and the smaller doses are continued for too long.

Using Coconut Husks.

Husks of coconuts are used by various manufacturers to be turned in to cordage, brushes or matting.

and our present lives determine the grade on which we must enter any next life.—Minot J. Savage.

Her Husband.

"I asked my husband for some pin money this morning." "What did he say?" "He asked me how much pins were a paper."

First Requisite.

Most persons think little of advice until they themselves have had experience upon which to base it.—Judge.

Daily Thought.

All that I have seen teaches me to trust the Creator for what I have not seen.—Emerson.

Epigram.
